Email 2 - Eavesdropping in a coffee shop

1. Native American Energy Tea
2. Drink THIS Native American tea for energy
3. Exhausted? Try this Native American energy tea

A week ago I listened to two ladies chatting in a coffee shop.

Bad of me to eavesdrop, I know.

But I heard something too intriguing to ignore.

One of the ladies was complaining about how tired, rundown and lousy she felt... (who doesn't, right?)

Well, get this...

The second lady stopped sipping her tea...

Looked at her friend with a warm smile...

And pushed her cup across the table.

“Here, try this,” she said.

“People used to drink it in my hometown of Ontario to boost their energy...”

“And I still love a hot cup when I need a lift.”

Well, the first lady took a sip...

And her eyes blazed like headlights!

“Wow, what’s in this?” she asked, suddenly perking up in her seat.

“Ah, you know... leaves, roots and tree bark mainly... oh, and boiled water,” the second lady said with a cackle.

Well, after listening in on this conversation...

My curiosity got the better of me.

Soon as I got home, I booted up Google to see what I could find out...

And I was left STUNNED to discover this Native American energy tea is a REAL thing!

Long before the invention of Red Bull...

People drank this Native American energy tea in Canada in their thousands.

And this Native American tea is even backed by the research of three Nobel prizewinners for its ability to turbocharge energy production in every cell...

So you can start feeling as energetic as the Duracell bunny...

And get more done in a day than you normally do in a week.
